The University of New Brunswick Law Journal is an annual publication devoted to the consideration of current legal issues, problems and philosophies through the presentation of articles, research notes, comments, and review articles in wide-ranging areas of law. The opinions expressed are those of the individual authors and not the University of New Brunswick Law Journal. The Law Journal circulates widely to members of the bars of the Atlantic provinces, law students at the University of New Brunswick, advertisers, and to law libraries throughout the world.

Note to Authors

Manuscripts should be written in English or French, typed, double-spaced, and submitted in hard copy or, preferably, electronic format. Please use the Canadian Guide to Uniform Legal Citation (6th ed.) and the current issue as a guide to format requirements.
